Bulgaria is bulging with notoriety.

'Tis President Garfield once again, and Williams college is the proud institution.

Another month and the country will again be saved—or lost; just as you are of a mind to look at it.

It really was not "The Christian" act for Liebler & Co. to have Lorne Elwyn arrested for alleged violation of copyright.

The Brattleboro newspaper correspondents have elected their townsman, Senator-elect Ernest W. Gibson, as president pro tempore of the Vermont Senate. Perhaps the twenty-nine other senators may be permitted to ratify the choice.

The Harvard football coaches say that Kermit Roosevelt has more sand than his elder brother, Theodore. Wait until some of those wicked opponents get hold of him and try to chew him into mince-meat, as they did young Theodore. Just because he is the son of a president they will take especial delight in "mince-meat-ing" Kermit; that is the American boy's makeup.

The relative importance of the study of tuberculosis can be judged by the international tuberculosis congress, which has been in session at the national capital for the past few days with representatives present from thirty foreign countries, together with many of the leaders of the anti-tuberculosis crusade in the United States. The presence of delegations from so many and so widely separated sections indicates that the whole civilized world is awakening to the importance of stamping out the disease. By this co-operation between nations and the consequent adoption of the best methods of attack, we shall be assured of the best results possible.

THE STATE HOUSE VENTILATION.

There is one thing to regret in connection with the opening of the Vermont legislature to-morrow, and that is that the two years which have elapsed since the last session were not sufficient to install a system of ventilation of the State House, as was the undoubted purpose of the members of the 1906 session when they took the matter up. However, there is one step, tardy nevertheless, for we now have expert testimony to back up the general opinion that the State House is about the most miserably ventilated that it could be. The Times trusts that the coming session will lose no time in ordering that the changes be made and that there be no delay in the carrying out of that order.

To breathe the air in those stuffy committee rooms is like drinking water from a stagnant, poisonous pool of water; and the two assembly halls, even with their greater size, are little better.

Every detail of correct dress—for every day and every occasion, for man and boy is here, and is just right.

All the new fads, all the novel ideas are represented in our stock as soon as shown in the New York stores, because we have a New York Resident Buyer, who sends us promptly all the new things.

Drop in and get an idea of our new store.

WE CLEAN, PRESS AND REPAIR CLOTHING.

ETROGERS & CO.

For the good health of the members of the coming legislature, the State House attaches ought to be instructed to give close attention to the primitive means of ventilation already afforded.

That the life of the farmer is not a dreary waste of labor is pointed out by the Boston Transcript, which attempts to disprove that the farmer is needing pity. This is the way our city contemporaries size up the situation: "Anybody who thinks the farmers of New England are living in solitude, out of touch with the great world and indifferent to the advantages of organization, is destined to a rude awakening if he subjects his impression to the test of fair-minded inquiry. Much 'pity' is patronizingly bestowed on the farmers, who resent it and reject it. Their winters are said to be depressing, whereas that season is in reality the period of their social gaieties, grange suppers, neighborhood sleighrides, festivities within the reach of moderate purses and moderate desires. Taken as a whole, the farmer's lot is not an unhappy one, any more than that of the hired man."

STRENGTHENING THE WATER SUPPLY.

Many Vermont communities have received a forcible lesson during the past few months of almost no rainfall that they must take steps to provide a water supply sufficient to meet normal needs at all periods of the year. St. Albans with several of its largest industrial plants shut down and several hundred workers consequently thrown out of employment, has had perhaps the most convincing argument. But there are many others which need to take too warning. Barre, for instance, did not escape a season of worry over the water situation and for a time it looked extremely serious. In our case there is at least one solution of the problem, and that is to provide a storage reservoir capable of holding a great quantity of reserve water. It is probable that sooner or later the city may be asked to stand back of just this kind of a project.

CURRENT COMMENT.

Center on Tariff.

The Gazette has a lot of respect for the party fealty of such men as John H. Senter of Montpelier, but like other men of sound sense partisanship sometimes blinds them to anything of credit in an opposing party. He told, with great stress in his talk on tariff here, of a condition which came to his notice while on a speaking tour at Richmond just before the recent election for governor. Eggs, butter and some other produce, he says, were higher at Abercorn just across the Canadian border, than they were at Richmond. Pork, too, was a cent a pound more on foot in Abercorn than in Richmond, and, said he, do you think they will jump over the line for the difference? Does not the market price of such commodities in this country somewhat regulate it in Canada? Hogs may not jump across the line, but thousands and thousands of Canadians do seek employment in our mills. In his talk on the subject Mr. Senter failed to use the illustration of what tariff has done for workmen employed in the granite industry. Ask the older granite men! When granite was on the free list it was shipped to the old countries, where labor is cheap, manufactured there, brought back, and sold in competitive market with our own manufactured stone. Then, too, a large per cent. of granite workers to-day come to this country where the industry is very prosperous and are able to support families across the waters.—Hardwick Gazette.

The Governor's Staff.

The St. Johnsbury Republican says, "We agree with The Burlington News that Governor-elect Prouty has done well in declining to comply with the demand of a portion of the state press to select his staff from the military arm of this commonwealth." The Burlington Clipper voices a similar sentiment. The contemporaries are laboring under a misconception of the matter. There has been no demand that Governor-elect Prouty shall select his staff from officers of the National Guard. Such change as would be made in the statute would probably take effect after his staff was appointed. The proposition is that the present law be changed so that the present military staff of the governor be abolished and that, hereafter, whenever it is desirable that he be attended on formal occasions by a military escort, a sufficient detail of proper officers be made from the National Guard for that temporary service. These officers would serve in their own rank and return to their stations when the detached service was concluded. They would be real officers, true soldiers, men sworn to the military service of the state in time of emergency, and their presence with the governor would mean something beside mere social pretense. Moreover, it might be held to be some inducement to ambitious and deserving officers of the militia to know that upon fulfilling certain tests of efficiency and devotion to duty they would be eligible to the honor of being aides-de-camp to the governor and commander-in-chief.

HANDSOME ENDORSEMENT.

For a Williamstown Boy Who is Running For Office in New York.

On earnest solicitation by leading members of the New York bar, Surrogate Charles H. Beckett of New York county, a former Williamstown boy, has decided to be a candidate for election to the office, to which he was appointed by Governor Hughes on the death of the late Surrogate Fitzgerald. Surrogate Beckett has the support of the New York Times, one of the influential papers of the city; and let him be the following powerful aid:

"His experience in probate matters and his long practice in that court constituted a qualification which left no doubt of the Governor's wisdom in selecting him, and the appointment commanded universal approval. Gliding members of the bar now unite in urging the nomination of Surrogate Beckett at the coming conventions of all parties." In a letter addressed to the Surrogate they say:

"Since your appointment as Surrogate, the dignity, ability, and administration of your duties, and the promptness with which you have dealt with the intricate questions submitted for your decision have been such as to win the confidence of the bar, and to deserve the gratitude of the community. We believe that the interests of the community will be served by your re-election as Surrogate."

This is competent testimony. The members of the bar best know with what ability and faithfulness Surrogate Beckett has performed his duties. The voters can ask no better guide, the party conventions will receive no better counsel, than that given by these members of the bar, who urge upon them the candidacy of Mr. Beckett. The office of Surrogate lies altogether beyond the domain of politics. That it should be faithfully and ably administered is a matter of peculiar interest and concern to a very large number of persons in the community. When the qualification of a judge already upon the bench is so abundantly attested, neither the Republican convention nor the Democratic convention, nor the convention of any other party, can have any good reason for declining to make a nomination so eminently fit to be made."
